GEORGE T. HAMMOND
Propriet:

HOW I LOST MY LOVER. BY NELL CLIFFORD.

"Be exceful of the fire, Nelly," was the last injunction of a thousand that my parents gave me, as they started off on a visit to some relatives residing eastward, beyond the White Mountains They were to remain absent about a fortnight; and I was to be commanderin-cheif of rows of shining milk-pans, pots, kettles, and household affairs in general and particular. Farmers' wives know that this is a post of considerable importance, one of bard duty and constant watchfulness. I was so thoroughly convinced of my competency as housewife, that I was sorely irritated when my good mother implied doubts of it, by her countless and repeated charges.

Now, I thought, "I am alone in my glury," as I sat down to recover the breath and patience I had lost in racing after collars, gloves, pins, and nock-ties; and in order to prepare for commoneing operations, which, I resolved, should astonish my unbelieving parents, and show them what a treasure of a daughter they unwittingly possessed. I glanced around. The rooms were in woful con-costs, pants, and east off shirts were scattered over the floor and chairs-cobwebs hung from the ceiling and windows; on the table lay a huge pile of unwashed dishes-and the half-opened duors rovenled tumbled beds and musny toilet-This accommulation of disorder could have driven Lord Chesterfield distracted; and no wonder the mirror opposite reflected a heated and impatient face. I was no longer to be daunted, however, for I had a notion to try what a pair of apry feet and hands could accomplish. At that instant, the old clock in the sitting room pealed forth one two, three, four, five; the morning was yet young; and I arose with a quick step and a light heart. Broom, brush, dishcloths and persevering labor, got the mastery; and I shortly surveyed, with mastery; and a known surveyou, with proud satisfaction, the beautiful order I had brought about. Something still was wanting; and snatching my broad-bring from its accusioned mail, with enger footsteps, I sought my flower garden. Selecting choice roses, paneles, and verbenns, I transferred them to our cosy parlor, very angels of fragrance and beauty. Nor was this all. I de-termined to get a dinner that would shed honor upon me; so, baring my arms, I was soon deep in Aunt Dinah's mysterics. thought-busy, and, as the sequel will prove, thought-wandering.

Through the tender care of the novelst, a heroine retains the immaculate whiteness of her robes, even though should wade through a mud puddle. He knows it would never do to introduce her washing hedraggled and bespattered skirts; it would sound unromantic. Well, I was once simple enough to believe all his fibs, and inclined to imitate his Lady Angelas in dress; so I donned my deintiest white muslin. While I stood before the glass, I could not help feeling a good deal of natural, feminine vanity, for I was looking my very hest. True, my figure was rather too short, and its proportion was of too healthy fullness for elegance; and, according to the American type of beauty, my cheek was of too rich a color; but I was pretty-there was no gainsaying it. My short, thick curls, and bright, black eyes were attractive; and I knew it. I was n vain puss then, a petted, half-spoilt, only daughter, and heiress to broad acres. You'll ask for whom were all these preparations i-certainly not for lone me. Who ever heard of a girl of eighteen working and puttering at such a rate, when she does not expect a beau? You see I knew, intuitively, that Philip Dean would come-you know Philip. There had been a little kindness growing up between us two from more babyhood. He had carried my dinner basket night and morning, during all our school-days; and always insisted that I was much handsomer and better than a rival belle, sweet Jenny Wheeler. Besides, he won my girlish gratitudo, by slyly working out f the long hard sums in the old arithmetic -no wonder he was undisputed owner

I had denied long freshs, I had been all solome and exposes with effect some of Southern and Pacific oceans are mostly inmost invariably his companion to all the the contradictions of his argument. singing schools, pic-nics, sleigh-rides, and boating excursions. It was his and boating excursions. It was his general rule to spend two evenings of the week at our house; yet, with all this attention, he had never spoken a word of love. Philip's classry "good moun-ing," in nowise tended to allay my per-turbation. His hasel eyes had never appeared so handsome and impassioned fore; nor had he been half so entertaining-oh! I was proud of him. We sat near each other; so near, that he toyed with my hand. It was a way Philip had, and I thought nothing of it. "How charmingly you are looking, Nelly," he said moving a degree nearer. (To be continued.)

HOW THE MESSAGE IS RE-CEITED.

The most diverse opinions respecting the President's message are expressed on all sides. The Washington correspondent of the New York Times says:

cross-fires from all parties—no one approving and all condemning it in severe terms. Some of the conservative men say they admire its tone and temper, but regret its logical and logal contradic-

"The truth is, the message is only laughed at by all parties. It raps them all over the knuckles, and then tries to pacify them. The Southern Senators are particularly severe in their critioisms, while the democrats in the House only ridicule it. Its contradictions are attributed to the fact of several parties being engaged at different times in patching it up to suit all sides."

Nes York World says:

"The message seems to be received well among the conservatives of the South, and generally, so far as the subject of secession is concerned, by the republicans also. The Douglas mon do head of Broad Street, and owned by not relish the President's territorial Mr. George Hazard, was discovered to be views. The ingenious arrangement of ject of secession coorsions much comment among those who have not given Mr. Buchanan oredit for the highest literary skill."

One correspondent of the New York Herald says:

"Its reading was listened to with the day. most protound attention in both Houses. You might have heard a pin drop on the republican side of the Benate, or on the democratic side of the House. The class for the purpose of perfecting them the message, and the ultra fire-eaters | paying the expense of lighting and warmdid not. Then there was a change. "Opinions differ about the Message It has not satisfied the South nor pleased the North. It afforded Mr. Olingman, in the Senate, an opportunity to nounce for disunion, and Mr. Crittenden to defend the Union. Gov. Fitz-patrick of Alaba ua, says that the Mas-sage will rather pracipit to action in the cotton States, and does not believe that anything that Congress may do can avert a disruption or stay the revolu-

"The Northwestern democrats may give support to some of the President's views, but the republicans oppose it in toto. A Northern republican Senator declares that there are five distinct falsehoods in it. Northern democratio Senators, including Bigler, Bright, Gwin, and others, friends of the administration, regard it as weak, and calculated to precipitate events in the Southern border States. Southern Sonators declare the Message to be work, vacillating, inconsistent and untrue.

The Herald (of course) says that so far from being disappointed in any constitute, it is "delighted with the celm patriotic, consistent and convinc-ing views of this admirable annual message. The last from Mr. Buchanan, it is his best, good as its predecements have been, each in its adaptation to the requirements of the time."

The Journal of Commerce thinks the "in the views expressed by the President upon the present agitating question, conservative and Union-loving men will find much to approve and little to condamn"; and says that "the document is characterized by the ability and clearness which distinguish all the papers emanating from the Executive department under this administration, and with the exceptions noted, we do not doubt that it will prove generally satisfactory to the country." Chief among the exceptions noted is the President's position as to the teriff.

In Richmond, Virginia, the message created a great sensation, and goes very much against the inclinations of the disunionists, who aver that they ought to be allowed to secede peaceably if they can. Some are of opinion that the Procident's instructions to the commander of Fort Moultrie will cause a great deal of trouble, and serious apprehensions are entertained in regard to it; but this is altogether an idle conjecture,

At Charleston, South Carolina, the moderate tone of the message eurprised most people. It was supposed that the "The message is bring riddled by President would declare for coercion.

Since the purport of the message has become known, many are in hopes that the separation will be peaceful.

The N. Y. Herald Washington correspondent under date 4th inst., says :

To-day the leading Republican Senators, such as Seward, Fessenden, Trumbull, Chandler, and Wilkinson, had a consultation, and were united and unhesitating in pronouncing the President's message a weak, namby pamby paper, unworthy such a man at such a time.

The President's position in regard to Utah is unsatisfactory, and is said to be erroneous. It is reported very positive lp if the South secede, Utah will certain-The Washington correspondent of the ly proclaim her independence, and be sustained by all people in that region.

PROSPECTUS.

PROSPECTUS.

The XXth volume of the Weerly Tripune commenced with the issue of Sept 1. During the past year The Tribune has been obliged to devote quite a large propurtion of its space to Politics, but we shall soon be able to force go Political discussion almost entirely, for months if not for years, and devote nearly all our columns to subject of less intense, but more abiding, interest. Among these, we mean to my expecial attention to.

1. BUCATION.—The whole subject of Education, both Popular and General, will be discussed in our columns throughout the year 1861, and we hope to elleft in that discussion come of the profoundest thinker, and the ablest instructors in our country. It is at once our hope and our recolve that the cause of Education shall receive an impetus from the exertions of The Tribune in the half during the year 1861.

11. Achiculture.—We have been compelled to restrict our cluvilations of this great interest throughout 1869, and shall encludated to render the reward of labor devoted to cultivation more ample or more certain, shall receive prompt and full attention.

111. MANDIAUTURE, We have been compelled to render the reward of labor devoted to cultivation more ample or more certain, shall receive prompt and full attention.

IV. FOREIGN AFFAIRS.—We employ the best correspondents in London, Paris, Turin, Berlin, and other European Capitals, to transmit us early and accurate advices of the great changes there silently but certainly proparing. In spite of the pressure of licensition of Politics, our Nows from the Oldmers to render it more perfect during the central year just before us.

V. Home News,—We employ regular paid correspondents in California, at the Isthmus of Darien, in the Rocky Mountain Gold Region, and wherever elsa they seem requisite. From the more accessible portions of our own country, we derive our information mainly from the multifatious correspondents of the Associated Press, from our exchanges, and the occasional letter's of intelligent friends. We aim to print the cheapest general newspaper, with the fullest and most authentic summary of useful intelligence, that is enzywhere afforded. Hoping to "make each day a critic on the last," and print a better and better paper from year to year, as our means are steadily enlarged through the generous co-operation of our many well-wishers, we solicit, and shall labor to deserve, a continuence of pubble favor.

There is a growth of the courses—
There is a growth of tenteur in the sace to appropriate the most expressive words of their languages, and after a white to incorporate them into our own; thus the Cepnulic, which is from the Grook, signifying "for the head," is now becoming popularized in connection with Mr. Spallings' great Head sahe remedy, but it will soon be used in a more general way, and the word Cephalio will become as common as Electrotype and manny others whose distinction as foreign words has been worn away by common usage until they seem "native and to the manor born."

DT HEADAGHS is the favorite sign oy which nature makes known any deviation whatever from the natural state of the brain, and viewed in this light it may be looked on as a safeguard intended to give notice of disease which might otherwise escape attention, till too late to be renedied; and its indications should never be neglected. Headaches may be classified under two names, vir: 8, intomatic and Idiopathic. Symtomatic Headaches readingly common and is the precursor of a greet variety of diseases, among which are Apoplexy, Gout, Rheumatiem and all febrile diseases. In its nervous form it is sympathetic of disease of the stomach, constituting sick headache, of hepatic disease constituting bisions headache, of worms, constituting bisions headache, of worms, constituting bisions headache, of the bowels, as well as renal and uterine affections. Diseases of the heat are very frequently attended with Headaches: Anema and plethola are also affections which frequently occasion headache. Idiopathic Headache is also very common being usually distinguished by the name of nervous headache, sometimes coming on suddenly in a state of apparently sound-health and prostrating at once the mental and physical energies, and in other lustances it omes on slaw y, heralded by depression of spirits or secrivity of temper—If most instances the pair is in the front of the head, over one or both yea, and sometimes provoking vomiting; under this cines may also be named Neuralyia.

For the treatment of cither class of Headache the Cephalic Pills have been foun' a sure and safe remedy, relieving the most acute pains in a few nitutes, and by its subtile power cradicating the diseases of which Headache is the uncerting index, Constinution or Costiveness.

Constitution or Costiveness.

No one of the "many ills that flesh in helr to" is so prevalent, so little understood, and a man an expected as Costiveness. Often originaling in carelosaness, or sedentary habits; it is regarded as a slight disorder of too little consequence to excite anxiety, while in reality it is the precursor and companion of many of the most fatal and dangerous diseases, and unless early endicated it will bring the sufferer to an unitarity grave. Among the lighter evils of which costiveness is the usual attendant are Headache, Colle, Rheumatism, Foul Breath, Piles and others of like nature, while a long train of frightful diseases such as Malignant revers, Alsecses, Dysentery, Diarches, Dyspepsia, Apoplexy, Epilepsy, Paralysis, Hysteria, Hypochondriasis, Molencholy and Irsanity, lirst indicate their presence in the system by this alarming symptom. Not unfrequently the diseases named originate in Constipation, but take on an independent ericence unless the cause is eradicated in an early stage.—
From slit these considerations it follows that the disorder should receive immediate attention whenever it occurs, and my persons should neglect toget a box of Cephalic Fills on the first appearance of the complaint, as their timely use will expet the insidious approaches of disease and destroy this dangerous foe to human life.
